Our Inspiration

Amidst our school's sanctuary, a radiant glow prevails,
Driven by your vision, our ambition never fails.
With each endeavour, your wisdom we embrace,
Guiding us forward, inspiring our grace.

Editorial

Education, for me, has never been about information alone. It has always been about formation.

As Principal of Daffodils World School, I firmly believe that education must prepare children for life, not only for examinations. A school's deeper responsibility is to shape thinking minds, steady hearts and individuals who can face the world with clarity, balance and compassion.

We do not see a child as a syllabus to be completed. We see a life in the making. Academic learning matters, but it finds meaning only when it is supported by values, self awareness and ethical understanding. Without this balance, education may create performers but it cannot create grounded human beings.

Our classrooms are designed to go beyond content delivery. They are spaces where questions are welcomed, dialogue is encouraged and reflection is valued. Children learn to express their thoughts with confidence, listen with respect and grow without comparison. Character is not built through instruction alone. It is shaped through daily experiences.

The world our children are stepping into is complex and demanding. It will test not just what they know but who they are. Resilience, empathy and moral judgment will matter as much as academic ability. Preparing children for this reality requires patience, consistency and a shared commitment between school and home. It requires educators who lead by example and parents who trust growth beyond marks and ranks.

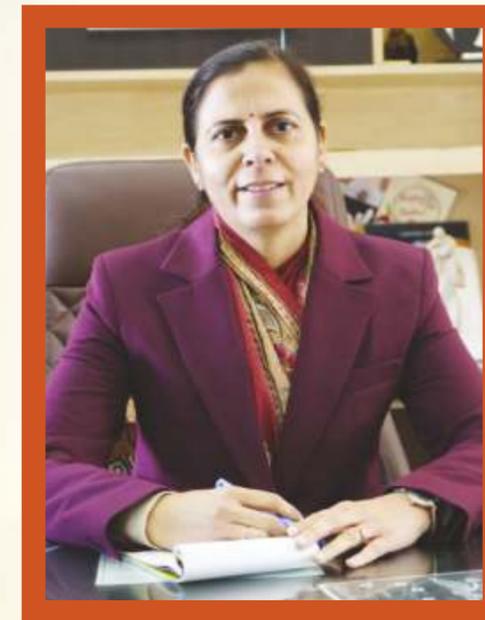

PANACHE reflects this spirit. It celebrates thought, creativity and mindful learning. It values depth over display and progress that may be quiet but is deeply meaningful. This publication mirrors our belief that true growth does not seek attention. It earns it.

As a school, we remain committed to education that is humane, reflective and life oriented. When learning is guided with care and rooted in values, children do not merely succeed. They find direction.

Take a moment to explore PANACHE and see how our school's philosophy comes alive through the voices of our children and educators.

My Utopian Vision

Will I be able to see through Yamuna & Ganga?
Will plastic get extinct
from my country, India?
Will I be able to breathe
in the so-called capital?
Will skills be worth more than marks?
Will children study to acquire knowledge?
Will Western education perish?
Will Western influence move out of India?
Will my imagination come true?
Will my utopian vision ever execute?

What would you be?

We come and go, like the rain.
Some stay longer as storms,
some stay silent as drops.
It will not hurt anyone to just be either rainbow or storm.
Both are important and equally admiring.
What would you be,
the flower blooming in rain
or the tree trembling in storm?
I want to be fresh as nature.

"The Last Chocolate"

One day I found a chocolate in my school bag. It was my favourite – Dairy Milk! I smiled and looked around. Nobody saw it. I wanted to eat it alone.
Just then I saw my best friend sitting quietly. She looked sad. "What happened?" I asked.
"My lunch was spoiled," she said softly.
I looked at the chocolate again. My mouth was already watering but then I remembered she had shared a sandwich with me last week when I forgot my lunch.
Slowly I walked to her and gave the chocolate to her. Her eyes lit up, and she hugged me tightly.
"I was hungry. Thank you!" she said with a big smile.
That day I did not eat the chocolate. However, I was full because my mind and heart was full of happiness—of the happiness, I saw on her face.
Moral:
Sharing makes our heart happy. Sometimes giving is sweeter than getting.

Dear Mom,

Today I want to ask you a question — "How are you?" Whenever me and father arrive from school or work, you are there, you always are. You come, ask us whether our day was good or not. You know, sometimes I wonder,
"ARE YOU REALLY HAPPY?" You left your career for me, something you put your life into. I don't remember the day I was born, but I was the happiest girl that day.
I want you to know that you mean the world to me. Today, while writing this, I want to say "SORRY" and "THANK YOU" for the time I yelled at you and at that time when you were there for me.
"I LOVE YOU MOM. I'LL ALWAYS DO."

FRIENDS

Friendship is such a bond that is not given by the world, rather chosen by our own self.

A friend is a person who supports us in every condition, who shares our emotions with us, who never leaves our path, who is always with us.

A friend is a person who supports all the relations, even they are like family.

A friend is a person with whom we laugh, talk, play & spend a lot of time with.

In each and everyone's life, there must be at least one, if not more, a friend, or say, "A Best Friend."

Art of Letting Go!

Have you ever lost someone close?

The one who always said –

“Even in the hardest times, I'll be with you,”

the one who spent the best days with you.

Have you ever?

Letting go is hard, but what if living with them suffocates you?

What if they make you feel unloved...

They always say that they love you,
but they never do something to heal you,
to make you feel special...

HAVE YOU EVER??

LET THEM GO

Luck and Karma.....

Once upon a time, there was a great emperor named King Ashoka. He always spoke truth and always gave justice to his people. One day suddenly when he was sitting on his throne, which had 32 pillars symbolizing 32 karma, a cobbler and a proprietor, came to his court arguing on a topic. The king asked them about the argument. Then the rich landlord said, 'O king, he says that he believes in karma but still he is a poor cobbler, but I believe in my luck and I am a rich landlord. Tell me who is right?' The king thought for a minute and said, 'I'll tell you the answer tomorrow. For now, you may stay in my palace.'

The king gave them a room and after some time he provided them a raw gourd. The cobbler, who was a simple man, started eating it, while the proprietor was not habitual of eating it, so he gave his gourd to the cobbler as well. Suddenly the king entered inside, saw both gourds on the cobbler's plate, and asked him about it and then the cobbler told him about the scenario. With a thought, the King Ashoka said to the proprietor that he believes in his karma and that is why he ate what he got, and you did not want to eat it, that is why you gave him your gourd, and that was his luck. So luck and karma both run in parallel. Then the proprietor and cobbler both went to their work happily.

In the same way in our life, luck and the act, we do run on the same way. It depends on your act (karma), on what you do, and then luck on what God gives based on your act. Never believe on luck blindly because it also works based on your act.

YOU'RE JUST TEENS

Our buried under the weight of childhood trauma, our chaos, and the future.

But no one's merging this in, "It's not a big deal."

They say "You are young." YES! IT IS!

Our able, emotional, moody, and can be turned into troubled, disturbed kids.

They know it, but you don't. No one sees how being pressured gets on our nerves.

You can't show it, that urge of blaming yourself, having to face much more child.

All we have to hear is "YOU'RE JUST TEENS."

Yes, we are teens but yet to be treated as a kid.

Expected to behave like adults.

Expected to handle every situation but never trained to do so.

All our hear is, "Don't be so weak!"

Well, we are JUST TEENS!

How to make good videos?

These are the letters that my keyboard felt when I was on the search of YouTube.com. Curious, enthusiastic, and avid — trying to stand out in this social media era.

"Press the record button," this is what the person in the first video said. "Am I a fool?" were my words when I was laughing and closing the video. There was an early innocence thing so-called film knowledge among those people on this era.

One said, "Make your shutter speed this, your ISO that, and take care of the exposure." The other said, "Have your story impact firm on the viewer."

"Shoot in good lighting." "Avoid long videos." "Make your edit clean." And a lot more information was flowing through my mind. I saw a few directors' interviews too. David Fincher uses smoke to make the scene look dramatic. Tarantino has a red color palette and similar type. The main technical part was done, now comes the idea. While surfing, I came across a dosa tutorial and suddenly my mind struck with an idea.

My mom was not home and the kitchen was all mine. I set up all the gear and lighting along with my beloved camera with fully formatted battery.

There I was, standing in front of the stove. I felt like I was in a cooking show. I passed the record button and shove my spatula in the batter and poured the first ever dosa I made. And yes I forgot to turn on the stove. I quickly cleaned everything and now with a smoking griddle. I was ready to rock the viral page . . . . The second one burned. I kept trying and cleaning and trying and cleaning. My mom came and shouted "My house" is on fire". I should back that it is just fog David Einchor does it too. After a several hundred attempts and the sink full of utensils there I was, standing full of sweat. I poured and made the fest dosa in the entire world. My eyes were sparkling until . . .

I saw, I have not pressed the record button.

The Horror Story of Pranjali

Pranjali with his 2 friends were studying in the same college of Delhi. All three friends decided to go for a trip to Rajasthan. They packed their stuff and headed towards Rajasthan. They were travelling through car at night. They decided to stay at a hotel. The hotel was full of silence. The three of them entered the hotel and went to the reception. They noticed the strange marks on the face and hands of the man, but as they were very tired, they did not pay much attention to it, took the keys of the room, and went in. It was around 12 o'clock when Pranjali heard the noise of a woman's anklet. He tried listening carefully and got to know the sound was from the corridor. He went there, looked around, but did not find anyone.

But suddenly he saw the receptionist running in the corridor. He was confused, but he decided to go back to his room and sleep. He was trying to sleep but could not, so he decided to exit near the window. As he stood there, he saw two cars coming towards each other and rather than putting brakes, they ended up in an accident. The accident was so horrible that it led to a fire on the road. While looking at this scene, Pranjali suddenly noticed the occupants at the site staring at Pranjali, smiling, and waving his hand. Pranjali was so scared that he decided to leave at that moment. But as they tried to get out of the hotel, the hotel structure became more complex, and those three were never seen again. They never came back to their home, nor came out of the hotel. It is still a mystery about what had happened with all three of them and where they all went.

On Feminism – A Hallucination...

“The house stands adjourned,” the Speaker said. I need to hurry up, the reporters are waiting and being Prime Minister of the country, I'll have to answer them. I was stepping out of the house and my mother called, “Wake up. It is already 5 AM?” Oh! That was a dream.

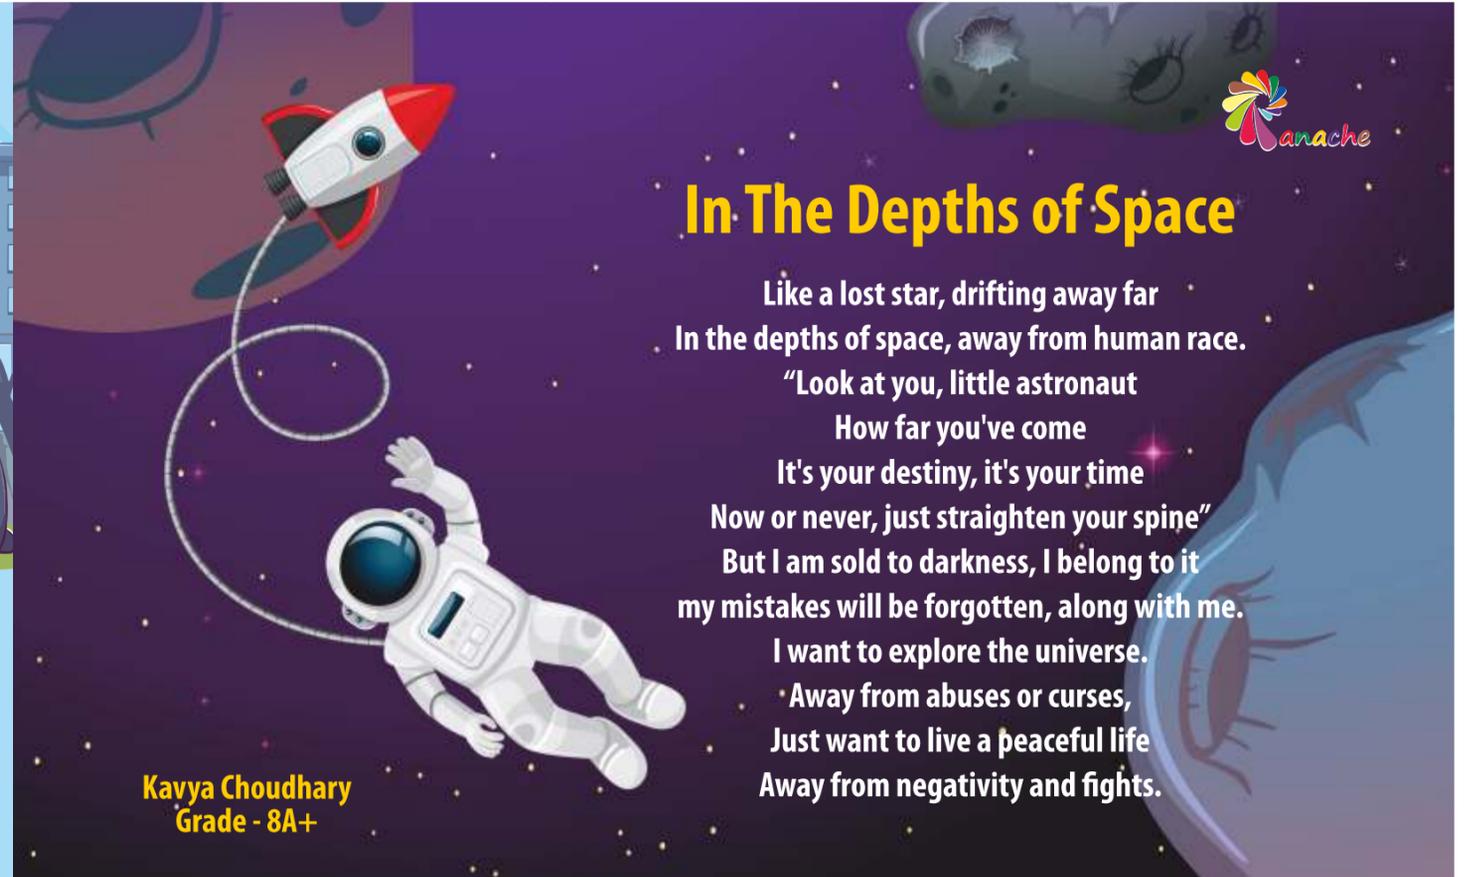

The dream I have always dreamt of, inspired by Lady Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. I asked my mom, “Why me? Why don't you ask Bhaiya for helping you?” She replied, “That left me confused. This is what girls do; you will have to do it.”

I am so fed up of the patriarchal society I live in. I am always told that one day I will get married and have children — this is what a girl's life is. I live in a semi-urban society, maybe girls from urban society are allowed to dream.

It was enough yesterday when my grandmother asked me to wash the dishes & said, “What will you do by studying? You have to be a housewife tonight.” And I decided to go away from home to urban society.

When I stepped out of the platform, I encountered a girl. She gave me a genuine smile & when I told her about my life, she said, “These urban people are proud of feminism, they just say these impressive words to fix in society. They themselves do not believe in women & women will have to fight & work hard, still we will be called incapable. Feminism is not just a word, it has to be proved in actions — only then will our future generations get equal rights.”

In The Depths of Space

Like a lost star, drifting away far
In the depths of space, away from human race.

“Look at you, little astronaut
How far you've come

It's your destiny, it's your time

Now or never, just straighten your spine”

But I am sold to darkness, I belong to it my mistakes will be forgotten, along with me.

I want to explore the universe.

Away from abuses or curses,
Just want to live a peaceful life

Away from negativity and fights.

Was It Real?

Once upon a time, there was a girl named Emily. She had always been fascinated by magical creatures and always dreamed of being one.

One night, she woke up by a strange noise. After looking around, she saw an opening in her room out of which light was pouring. Out of excitement, she entered into it and very soon, she found herself in a magical world. She saw fairies, creatures and plants. She had never witnessed anything of this kind before.

Soon, something as big as a horse came running towards her. She was afraid at first, but after seeing what the creature actually was, she was stunned. She could not believe her eyes, as it was so unreal. The Pegasus lowered his back to let Emily ride him and just the next moment, she was in the air flying in the sky.

But when the Pegasus started rising higher, Emily heard a voice— “Wake up! Emily!” She woke up from her dream but she still wonders if it was really a dream or was it real?
